WSU soccer player only second black admitted to South African med school

DAVE CLARK
Sports Editor

Lewellyn Oliphant's Wright State soccer career has come to an abrupt end.

No, this is not another "athlete gone bad" drama, but it is a story of determination and dream fulfillment. These stories are the rare and special kind that sports writers seldom get to write.

OLIPHANT

The South African-born midfielder is leaving WSU to return to his troubled homeland and to attend the University of Cape Town's School of Medicine.

The letter of acceptance from Cape Town was a culmination of a long time struggle by Oliphant to become only the second black to attend the university.

"Lew went after it," head soccer coach Greg Andrulis said. "They gave him the run around, but he stuck with it. He followed all the correct channels, and I knew he had the academic standards to be there. He never gave up, he just went after it."

Those words also sum up Oliphant's soccer career here at WSU.

Lew is the kind of person you don't run across very often," Andrulis said. "He's special, and he's gone through so much. He'll be sorely missed here, but he's doing what he wants to do, and I'm ecstatic for him."

In his two years on the Wright State soccer field, Oliphant played in 30 games, scored two goals, and had two assists. Next season, Oliphant more than likely would have garnered a starting spot for the soon-to-be Division I Raiders.

Why go back to South Africa when soccer stardom may lie ahead? Just give Oliphant a second to answer.

"I feel that it would be better for me to go to school where I'm going to practice (medicine)," Oliphant said. "It was great coming here, and I have mixed emotions about leaving. I'm happy to go to med school where I have always wanted to go, but it's not easy to just leave."

"I've had fun here. I had a rough first quarter, getting used to everything, but once I got used to it, I pulled through."

Oliphant does not foresee any major problems in going back to his native country.

"It will be a little difficult," Oliphant said, "because I've become Americanized. But I was born and raised in Cape Town, and I know what to expect."

"There are some changes that I am going to have to make, though, like slowing myself down. I'm going to have to party less and study more, because there's a 70 percent flunk out rate in the first year. After the first year, however, I might bring back my social life."

As for how soccer will fit into his life, Oliphant will put the roundball on hold for now, but "I'll never really quit playing soccer, it's part of my life. After that first year, I will take up play seriously again, but for now, I'll just play recreationally."

Students look at English as a foreign language through the TESOL program

By LLOYD DEVAULT
Special Writer

By entering and completing the Teachers of English to Students of Other Languages (TESOL) program at Wright State, students are able to travel abroad with little money and meet people of different cultures.

"If an individual retires at 40, has an income and wants to travel," said Marguerite MacDonald, director of the TESOL program at Wright State, "teaching English in a foreign country is often an ideal way to not only supplement that income, but also to participate more fully in the culture. It offers the individual an opportunity to know the people in a way that would not be possible by simply living in the country or traveling as a tourist."

The TESOL program acquaints students with the basic knowledge and skills necessary to teach English as a second or foreign language. It consists of six courses in English and education, including history of the English language, TESOL methods and materials, sociolinguistics and grammatical structures of English. A comprehensive final exam is given to evaluate the students' knowledge of TESOL subject matter.

A demand for the TESOL program led Larry Hussman, a professor of English at Wright State, to initiate the program in 1980 at WSU. Many students entered the TESOL program at first, but according to MacDonald, enrollment has tapered off to a steady rate.

Approximately 50 certificates have been issued so far, with students going on to teach in a variety of foreign lands.

"If you go abroad, the TESOL certificate shows the people you have credentials for teaching English as a second or

National fall enrollment goes up defying dismal predictions

By LISA JEAN SILVA

(CPS)--Defying predictions once again, enrollment on the nation's campuses rose last fall, the U.S. Department of Education reported last week.

The Education Dept.--as well as virtually every other agency and observer who ventured a guess--last summer predicted enrollment would hold steady or fall slightly this year.

The department's Center for Education Statistics said in a press release that some institutions attributed the year's increases to improved academic programs--some developed especially for women--and to more intensive recruiting of non-traditional students.

All told, 151,000 more students enrolled this year, bringing the total number of people taking classes last fall to 12.3 million. It amounted to a

Eastwood wears the white hat again in Heartbreak Ridge

By SCOTT UZZEL
Staff Writer

Clint Eastwood is a constant. In an era of filmmakers who strive to blur the line between good and evil into ambiguity, Eastwood stands pat.

When you go to see a "Clint Eastwood movie" you won't find many grey areas, especially in Eastwood's own characters. From Harry Callahan to Philo Beddoe, they all have a sense of justice and a code of conduct based upon it. They also have little or no tolerance for others who deviate from that code.

There you have the essence of Eastwood's Gunnery Sergeant Tom Highway in Warner Brothers' Heartbreak Ridge.

Highway is a hard-nosed traditionalist nearing the end of a long and illustrious career in the Marine Corps. He requests reassignment to the 2nd Marine Reconnaissance Platoon, the unit he started out with.

Highway served in the Korean War, where he won the Congressional Medal of Honor, and in the Vietnam War, where he was also highly decorated. He has now returned to 2nd Recon to undertake the task of training a platoon of foul-ups that would make Gomer Pyle blush into combat-ready Marines.

However, his duty is complicated by his commanding officers. The battalion leadership is held by Major Powers (Everett McGill), a supply depot bureaucrat with a distaste for "dinosaurs" like Highway. The platoon leader, Lieutenant Ring (Boyd Gaines), is a well-intentioned fumbler fresh out of Officer Candidate School.

The entire situation becomes a life or death issue when Highway's platoon is sent to a tiny island in the Caribbean called Grenada to rescue U.S. medical students from Cuban troops.

Through it all, Highway attempts to rekindle the old spark with his ex-wife Aggie (played by real-life ex-wife Marsha Mason), while trying to understand his personal failings in their broken marriage.

The title Heartbreak Ridge refers to both the Korean battle where Highway distinguished himself, as well as a turning point in his life. He is confronted with a career near its end and a rite of passage, both with the woman he loves and "the new Marines."

However, the title could easily have been Sands of Grenada, so close is Eastwood's Highway to John Wayne's Academy Award-nominated portrayal of Sergeant John Stryker in Sands of Iwo Jima (1949).

In fact, there is more than just a passing resemblance between Wayne and Eastwood, who also produced and directed the picture. Highway, a man of instinct and action whose breed has all but been replaced by men of a more intellectual nature, is a soulmate of Wayne's Tom Doniphon, a gun-fighter forced to bow out to a torney Ransom Stoddard (Jimmy Stewart), in The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance (1962).

Clint Eastwood is still the good guy in Heartbreak Ridge.

Highway's embarrassed by 88 tions when caught reading assoc ticles on marital commun than with women is evident Heartbreak Ridge.

But perhaps the closest similarity to Wayne's work evidence here is with She a Yellow Ribbon (1949). Wayne's Captain Nathan B tles, a career U.S. Cavalry fier on the verge of both ment and one last Indian ere could easily be Highway's great-grandfather.

Then there's Highway's sidekick, Master Sergeant Choozoo (Arlen Dean Sny who bears a striking

Men enjoy winning swim weekend ; women don't

Wright State's men's swim team had a successful weekend in the pool bringing home victories over three teams. However, WSU's women didn't fare so well.

On Friday night, the men and women met Vanderbilt University's swimmers, coming out with a split decision as the men won 7-36 and the women lost 65-48. In the men's meet, the Raiders dominated, placing first in nine of the 13 swimming and diving events. In fact, the men placed at least a second place finish in every event.

Leading the Raiders to victory were Scott Troutwine and Brad Carpenter, who each placed first in his two individual events as well as leading his relay teams to victory.

Troutwine placed first in both the 50-yard freestyle and 200-yard backstroke, while his 400-yard medley relay team won impressively.

Carpenter won both the 1,000-yard and 500-yard freestyle events, while leading his 400-yard freestyle relay team to more than a six second victory over the closest Vanderbilt team.

Senior J.R. Geraci was a one-man show in the diving events, as he won both the one meter and three meter diving events with respective scores of 280.350 and 293.925.

In the women's meet, Vanderbilt turned the tables on the Raiders as the VU swimmers won nine out of 13 events.

However, Wright State did have its bright spots as Karen Kimpton won both of her individual events as well as teaming with Anika Borg to lead the Raiders' 400-yard medley relay team to victory.

Kimpton also won the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:12.32 and the 200-yard butterfly event with a time of 2:08.14.

Borg was the only other Lady Raider to place first in an event as she won the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2:29.92.

Along the way to victory in the 200-yard individual medley, Karen Kimpton qualified for the Division II National Meet. Sheryl Poppe also qualified on the three-meter diving board.

Saturday afternoon, the Raider men swimmers and divers traveled to Western Kentucky University to face both the teams from Western Kentucky and the University of Alabama A&M.

The Raiders won both portions of the tri-meet, beating WKU 66-46 and A&M by a score of 63-20. They continued to improve and gel as a team as was shown by the 11 first place finishes recorded by Raider men.

Troutwine led the Raiders once again, showing his versatility by winning the 200-, 500- and 1,000-yard freestyle events.

Also putting in an excellent performance for the Raiders was Hayhow, who won the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 22.05 and the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 48.70. Between Troutwine and Hayhow, the Raiders made a clean sweep of all five freestyle events.

Geraci continued the excellent diving he has displayed all season, winning both diving events. In the required diving event, he compiled a score of 162.40 to defeat the closest opposition by over seven points. In the optional diving event, Geraci pulled away from the pack, compiling a score of 250.90 to win by over a six-point margin.

The freshman Raider swimmers gave indications of a bright future for the Raider swim team, as Carpenter, Chris Dieter and Doug Kellerstrass had impressive outings in this stern test.

Carpenter placed second in both the 1,000-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle, finishing behind only teammate Troutwine in both events.

Dieter won the 200-yard breaststroke outright with a time of 2:12.00 and finished second in the 200-yard individual medley.

Kellerstrass recorded an

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Not all Lebanese are terrorists, student says

To The Daily Guardian Editor:

I start my subject by a wish that the American people won't think of all Lebanese people the way they are shown in the news recently. Because unfortunately, we the Lebanese can do nothing about this terrorism which is perpetrated by small extremist Lebanese groups.

As a Lebanese student at Wright State University, I strongly oppose what's happening in my country and hope the four latest kidnapped Americans return safely to their homes. Two of the professors who were taken hostage were my instructors at Beirut University College, and I knew them very well. I would like to express my sympathy to their families and wish them a safe return, with all kidnapped foreigners.

These acts are against the majority of peoples' beliefs, but we have in Lebanon some people who are extremists, and they hide under the guise of a "holy cause."

What is happening in Lebanon is terrorism itself, because if these terrorists were really Islamic, they wouldn't kidnap innocent people, regardless of nationality or beliefs.

In conclusion, no religion would approve of such acts, so what is happening in my country is ugly and is justifiably criticized by everyone, including the majority of Lebanese people.

Stop 'Ronnie Rambo;' stop the killing; stop aid

Dear Editor;

The students of WSU should realize what supporting the Contras "really" means. Your tax money goes to fund devastating attacks against the civilian population of Nicaragua.

More than 200,000 Nicaraguans have been driven from their lands and 12,000 have been killed. The numbers mount daily.

They have been killed by the Contras: monsters who don't want to build, but to destroy. Since 1981, 31 health centers, 58 schools, 11 day care centers, 291 vehicles, 2,270 homes and 565 other buildings have been destroyed.

"Ronnie Rambo's" goal is to overthrow the Sandinista government. To accomplish this he has tried to destroy this tiny country by crushing its economy and unleashing his Contra terrorists. Their campaign of aggression is directed against innocent and defenseless civilians. So far, the brave Nicaraguans have refused to "cry uncle" to Reagan's fascist bully boy tactics.

We the students and faculty members of the PLEDGE OF RESISTANCE are strongly opposed to this war. On behalf of the thousands of Nicaraguan people who have been killed, we make this appeal to you;

*Take an interest. You can't defend or protest this war unless you know what is going on. I suggest you try reading one of the books from the Central American history section of the WSU Library such as Endless War by James Chace.

*Speak out against this wasteful and pointless bloodshed. Tell your friends, parents and professors what you think and feel.

*Write your elected representatives and force them to face these stark human consequences.

We ask you to join with us to support peace not war.
STOP CONTRA AID!

Show your Raider pride and spirit

Dear Editor:

Yesterday, while walking through the University Center, I overheard a conversation between two students. They were complaining about how they thought Wright State wasn't a "real" school. As a student here, I often hear complaints like these. These mindless complaints really anger me. The students, staff and faculty have so much to be proud of. We have a new determined president, a bright spirited mascot, new housing, brilliant professors, a beautiful campus, some of the best students in the country and a new major publication, a yearbook, the Raiders' Treasure.

I wonder when WSU will wake up. A school is what you make of it. You simply have no room to complain about WSU if you're not involved. The old excuse, "I'm too busy to get involved" just doesn't excuse you anymore. The majority of students that head campus organizations are full-time students, part-time employees and club members of usually more than one club. I too am busy, but I make time to participate in clubs and support Raider activities in order to make WSU a better place to study, live and grow.

I propose to the WSU community an opportunity to become more involved. Raider Week is coming up during Feb. 16-21. This annual event, sponsored by Inter-Club Council, is a celebration designed to give students an opportunity to show their Raider spirit. The highlight of the entire week is Raider Daze where clubs and organizations gather together, set up booths for games and food, and party in the fun spirit of WSU. Take the time to go. You could become interested in a particular campus organization and the very least you will have a fantastic time.

Eat, drink and be merry while at the same time support the hard work of many determined students.

Enjoy what Wright State has to offer. Show your Raider spirit and pride in our school.

The 'Hot Rod' may turn in his trunks this March

By SCOTT UZZEL
Staff Writer

Say it isn't so, Roddy!

While listening to the news on WLW-Radio last week, I heard something so incomprehensible that I nearly attempted suicide with a foreign object.

Right there on my truck radio was World Wrestling Federation superstar Rowdy Roddy Piper, (not to be confused with the insipid Rowdy Raider), announcing that he may retire following Wrestlemania III which takes place March 29.

It was hard enough to accept Piper, "The Bad Boy of Professional Wrestling," making peace with arch-enemy and convicted go-gooder Hulk Hogan; but what will my Saturday mornings be like without the ever-controversial Piper's Pit?

Tell me Santa Claus is a myth, tell me rasslin' is fake, but please don't tell me "Hot Rod" is calling it quits. C'mon, if, give me a break!

In all fairness, however, would Piper make good on his great, his decision would be as understandable as it is lamentable. In addition to starring in the soon-to-be-released motion picture, Body Slam, Piper said he has several offers to do other projects, including a Superman flick.

The man is hot, or as Gorilla Monsoon would say, "A house afire!" According to Pro Wrestling Illustrated, Piper went from "Most Hated Wrestler of the Year" in both 1984 and '85 to "Most Popular Wrestler of the Year" in 1986. He received 13,814 fan votes to runner-up "Saint" Hogan's 12,911.

"I want to go out while I'm on top," Piper told WLW news.

One thing's for certain--Piper will stay in the mat wars long enough to score a decisive victory in his feud with the hormone-imbalanced Adorable Adrian Adonis.

My prediction for the site of Piper's triumph is--you guessed it--Wrestlemania III.

However, the Piper vs. Adonis battle is small potatoes compared to what else will transpire at Wrestlemania III. A quick glance into my crystal

Raider Daze booth applications due

By ALANA O'KOON
Managing Editor

With less than a month to go, Inter-Club Council worked on finalizing plans for Raider Daze at yesterday's meeting.

Raider Daze will be held in late January throughout the University Center. It is traditionally one of the highpoints of Raider Week, a week-long celebration of school spirit.

Eighteen clubs will have the opportunity to run booths at the Daze. Six booths will serve food that require electrical preparation. These will be located in the cafeteria line. The other 12 booths can serve food but are not explicitly set aside for that purpose.

All booth applications are due Monday by 5 p.m. in the ICC office.

The cleaning contract will be awarded next week to a group with 15 available members. This group will receive $300 for their service.

There are still questions regarding the sale of beer. Currently, there are negotiations taking place on whether students can sell the beer tickets and who will get the shares of the beer profits.

In other Raider Week business, ICC will also sponsor a decorating contest for up to 20 groups. These groups will each have an area of campus to decorate and the best overall will win a prize.

A grant from Budget Board will allow those groups who participate to be reimbursed up to $50 of their decorating costs.

Also at the meeting, guest speaker Vince O'Brien, senior marketing major, discussed a spring break bus trip to Daytona Beach, Florida.

O'Brien said the cost for the trip is $225 if you ride the bus and $145 if you drive yourself. He also said if 10 or more people get together he will try to work out group rates.

O'Brien can be reached in the Student Government Office but SG and WSU are not affiliated with the trip.

Stover helps Lady Raiders shoot to top of region

By TODD BUNNELL
Special Writer

The Wright State Lady Raiders basketball team is currently riding a 13-game winning streak. They are 17-2, ranked first in the Great Lakes Region, and 13th in the nation in Division II.

One reason for their continued success is junior guard Tammy Stover. She's coming off three outstanding games at the Davis and Elkins Mountain Classic, in which Wright State came away with the championship trophy. Stover scored over twenty points in each of the three games.

STOVER

Pat Davis, the women's head basketball coach, said, "We'd get her free on the outside and it was just boom, boom, boom."

Indeed, Stover is a great outside shooter.

An hour before each game, she goes out and shoots baskets. Her dedication pays off, which is evident in a 15.4 points per game average and over 80 percent from the free throw line after 15 games.

Being ranked 13th adds pressure to the team, but also "helps the team out by gaining confidence," Stover said. The team goals are to make it to post-season play and to stick together. Stover said they still have some work to do to get to tournament.

"We're very strong the second half," said Stover. "We just have to work on the first half and turn it on in the very beginning to get that far."

Even though this is Stover's first year at Wright State, she's a very seasoned veteran.

Stover played high school ball at Little Miami High School in Morrow, Ohio, and played at Lee's Jr. College.

At Lee's, she went to the national tournament, so she's no foreigner to winning. At Lee's, she said she gained more confidence and worked hard on the fundamentals. She was ready to play when she came to WSU.

Perhaps her greatest asset is her defense. She's a very versatile player, but many times she plays outside as a small forward.

At this position, she's quite adept at producing good lays and causing turnovers. She leads the team in steals with 56. She steals the ball with anticipation.

"She's very aggressive and intense," Davis said. "Anticipation is the key to her steals."

Marvin Gross, the assistant women's basketball coach, said her playing ability is due to a "lot of desire. She wants to win and works hard to achieve her goals. She's a very quiet person but does her talking on the court."

"She's quiet, but loud on the floor," Gross said. "She just gets better as the game goes on. She really takes it to the basket."

Stover's parents and family really back her up. They come to almost every game and even went down to West Virginia to watch the Davis and Elkins tournament. When she hears her family cheering for her, "It gives me something else to work for," she said. Knowing there's some familiar faces in the crowd, she seems to feel better and wants to work harder.

Stover's dedication and desire have really paid off. She's started every game this year and is among the leaders in almost every stat. Also, she is rarely taken out of the game because at any moment she can create a turnover or spark the team with an outside shot. "I'm extremely hesitant to take her out," Davis said.

Helped by Stover's hard work and desire, the Lady Raiders have a chance to go to the national tournament. According to Stover, if the team can perform like they did at the Davis and Elkins Classic, they'll have an easier shot.

Outside of basketball, Stover's an elementary education major and enjoys playing softball in the spring.

Note: On February 7, the Lady Raiders have a rematch with Northern Kentucky at NKU. They gave the Raiders their last loss by beating WSU 68-67.

Wright State, though, has several games in between before looking for revenge.

A mid-season report: WSU grapplers have faced toughest opponents ever

By JOE HERPY
Associate Writer

"It has been a humbling experience wrestling against the Division I schools without much success," said Wright State head wrestling coach Al Manning.

The 1986-87 Raider grapplers are facing their toughest schedule in the history of the wrestling program.

While other Raider sporting teams are tangling with their usual Division II opponents, or maybe an occasional NAIA school, Manning's squad has knocked heads and bodies with the likes of Ohio State, Ohio University, Toledo, and Miami of Ohio.

The Raider matmen scored a victory over the Redskins of Miami, but lost miserably to Toledo and Ohio State.

"We had to wrestle OSU first (Ohio State and Toledo were Raider foes at a tri-meet in Toledo), and they were a very physical team," Manning said. "I think it might have hurt us, because we probably could have beaten Toledo if we were fresh."

Adding to the rough competition is a tough schedule that sees the Raiders on the road for 10 of their 15 meets.

According to Manning, the difficulty encountered on the road was increased due to the fact the Raiders have had to rely on newcomers to fill starting spots left vacant by injured upperclassmen.

Freshman Bryan Lewis is currently holding down the 134 pound spot vacated by Skip Smith. Smith, who had compiled a record of 10-4-1, has been sidelined with an ankle injury that he suffered two weeks ago in practice.

Out for the season are 118-pounder Mark Kundtz and 150-pounder Kenny Smith, and according to Manning, both could possibly red-shirt the rest of the season.

Also out with an ankle injury is regular 118-pounder Jerry Williams, but he is expected to return before the season's close.

As if the Division I teams were not enough, the Raiders have met and defeated the number one Division II squad, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, and they have also downed the nation's sixth-ranked squad, Pitt-Johnstown.

"The wrestling experience that our young wrestlers are receiving is invaluable," Manning said.

Losing to the big schools is not wearing the Raiders down though.

"Good attitudes and enthusiasm are growing," Manning said, "Our team leadership is strong, and we are a solid team."

Manning and assistant coach Tim Begley believe the team should be at or near full strength when the Midwest Regionals roll around in late February.

PAD NOTES: The latest wrestling poll places the Raiders in the number seven position. Their losses to OSU, Toledo, and Ohio University should not hurt that ranking too much, as both OSU and OU are among the top 30 in Division I.

CORRECTIONS

In yesterday's Daily Guardian, the headline "Students travel and learn for college credit" (about the International Exchange Program) was misleading. While students in the program have a choice, they can earn independent study credit, the program itself is a credit program.

Also, in yesterday's paper, the inadvertently ran last Friday's Campus Events information instead of the correct data. We apologize for any inconvenience.

Women getting the 'cold shoulder' on campus

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)-- In what seemingly has become an annual condemnation, a leading national college women's group said campuses nationwide still are fundamentally inhospitable to women.

Discrimination, the Washington-based Project on the Status and Education of Women recently reported, is subtler, hiring practices are less sexist and male professors are friendlier, but college campuses remain a "chilly" place for most women students and faculty members.

"While many men are not even aware they're being discriminatory," explained Bernice Sandler of the Project, which is part of the Association of American Colleges, "many women don't realize when they're being discriminated against."

Women are now getting better jobs in higher education, but have a harder time getting promotions than their male counterparts do, the report--called "The Campus Climate Revisited: Chilly for Women Faculty, Administrators and Graduate Student"--asserts.

And progress may slow in the near future, other observers say, because many people think most of the problems of college sexism are solved.

"Some say the 1970s was the decade for women, and now we're passed that," said Judy Touchton of the American Council on Education's Office of Women in Higher Education. "But we're not. There's a continuing need to keep women on the agenda. Our intention is to make sure lots of others talk about treatment of women in higher education."

So one reason for "The Campus Climate Revisited," which reprises many of the points made in the Project on the Status of Women's 1984 report called "The Campus Climate," is in part to "keep up the momentum" of change.

"There's lots being said and lots of studies and articles being written about what needs to be done," Touchton said. "It's hard to say how successful we are, but we want references to women and to discrimination in every report on higher education."

The new report notes few if any college still openly discriminate against women or even condone discrimination by ignoring it.

"Lots of overtly discriminatory practices have been handled," Sandler said. "Now it's more subtle, but people are more aware of the issues."

"There are people who believe that discrimination on campus has been solved once you let women in as teachers and administrators. But that's not enough."

In most schools, Sandler continued, fewer than two women hold senior administrative positions, which promotes the idea that higher education is a career for men, not women.

"Progress has definitely been made," said Mary Gray, an American University math professor and president of the Women's Equity Action League. "It's easier for women to get a first job and to get tenure than it was years ago.

"Still, it's hard to move up in administrative positions or to get tenure at the most prestigious universities. Keeping up the momentum is hard."

The movement now is toward specific issues, often dealing with both sexes, Gray noted.

"Now many campuses are adopting parental leave policies which apply to men as well as women," she explained. "The impetus for it is women, but when men see it as something that applies to them, it broadens the base of support."

Salary and promotion equities remain the key issues for women educators, she said. Faculty, administrators and students all seek the same professional treatment given their male counterparts.

Enrollment

one percent increase in the American student body, the department census showed.

A wide variety of schools enjoyed increases. Virginia's community colleges, the University of Maine System, the University of Minnesota System, Eastern New Mexico, and Western Michigan, among scores of others, all reported jumps.

On the other hand, schools like Montana State, the College of Santa Fe (N.M.) and Blue Ridge Technical College (N.C.), suffered population losses.

The biggest increases, though, were among two-year colleges, which had suffered the biggest enrollment losses in 1985-86.

Nationwide, two-year college enrollment rose a significant 2.5 percent.

Enrollment at four-year schools held steady, partly because of "intensive" marketing efforts aimed at older and part-time students as well as traditionally-aged freshmen, the department found.

Many experts had predicted college enrollment would decline precipitously through the decade because there are fewer 18-year-olds--the people who traditionally have populated campuses--in the population at large.

But the new Education Dept. census shows college enrollment nationwide has declined only once, in 1984. That decline, moreover, followed 1983's all-time record enrollment of 12.46 million students.

"The big story is that the projected decline has not occurred," said Dan Savage of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC) in Washington, D.C.

"The available pool (of college students) was to (shrink) by 50 % because of fewer traditionally aged students," Savage explained, "but there are a whole lot of adults going to college, especially nontraditionally aged women."

For example, enrollment at tiny Arkansas Baptist College in Little Rock will "increase slightly" in the coming years as the "majority of students" will come from people older than age 25, predicted admissions director Mary Jacobs.

"There's also a trend toward part-time students" at two-year colleges, added Dean Donald Shoemaker of Blue Ridge Technical College in Flat Rock, N.C.

Some smaller four-year universities, by contrast, are struggling to keep the students they have.

"We're hoping to stay approximately the same--at about 6,500 students--during the next five years," said Gary Wickstrom, registrar at Michigan Technical University in Houghton, Mich. In the early 1990's, the number of 18-year-olds in the general population is due to creep upward again.

Until then, Michigan Tech admissions Director Fred Gunnell hopes to recruit older, employed students "who are retraining to put themselves in a better position for job placement or advancement."

The AACJC's Savage noted the job market could have a big impact on enrollment trends during the next few years.

"When people are out of work, they go back to school. There was a community college boom with the last recession."

Further projections are for "level enrollment," Savage noted, "but the wild card here is senior citizens. A rapidly growing segment of the student population is the over-45 group. Some colleges plan to build what are called 'renaissance communities' (retirement communities) right on campus."

turnbuckle reveals that all three WWF titles will change hands, including Hogan's World Championship.

The next WWF World Champion will be none other than Andre the Giant! No, this is not a chemically-induced prediction. Andre, fed up with living in the Bulkster's shadow, will turn on the champ and capture his belt. Guiding Andre to the top will be his former nemesis, Bobby "The Brain" Heenan.

Sound far-fetched? Just remember you heard it here first. By March 30 I'll be known as the "Nostradamus of the Squared Circle."

In other title changes, the Hart Foundation, aided by a fast count from referee Danny Davis, will take the World Tag Team Championship from the British Bulldogs; while Randy "Macho Man" Savage will lose the Intercontinental belt to Ricky "The Dragon" Steamboat.

How, you may ask, will Savage take the title from Andre? He won't have to. After Andre cripples Hogan in Wrestlemania III, The Giant will retire undefeated, setting up a tournament to determine the champion. Savage will defeat and humiliate Steamboat in the final round and "Machomania" will be runnin' wild!

And what of Hogan? Look for him to spend 1987 recuperating from his injuries and licking his wounds in preparation for--that's right--Wrestlemania IV.
